

NEW YORKERS ON THEIR SEX LIVES AT HOME ...

HOW HAPPY ARE New Yorkers in their bedrooms? For this exclusive New York Magazine poll, Global Strategy Group surveyed New Yorkers in all five boroughs. All 401 anonymous respondents were either married or in a serious, committed relationship. As it turns out, most are very content: 46 percent rated their satisfaction level 9 or 10 out of 10. But as you'll see on the facing page, not everyone feels that way—and, happy or not, these New Yorkers weren't shy about telling us exactly what they're doing.

Have you ever suspected your current spouse of cheating?

"Years ago. I accused him of [cheating with] my sister. I don't know how true it was, but I didn't talk to him a while."

Have you ever cheated? "Yes. To pay him back. ... I felt bad."

Two wrongs don't make a right."

Would you cheat if there were no way you'd ever be found out?

"He would find out. I'm Catholic."

Have you followed your partner? "One time. I walked into a pole and busted my head. I got the scar to prove it. He was going to hang out with some guy—I thought it was a female. He found out."
